PhD Fellowship on Design of web 2.0-mediated learning in tourism education Job ID 096611

The Department of Business Communication and Information Science, at the campuses Esbjerg/Kolding, invites applications for the position of PhD Fellowship on Design of web 2.0-mediated learning in tourism education. The position is available from September 1, 2009, or as soon as possible thereafter, and for a period of 3 years. The PhD Fellowship on Design of web 2.0-mediated learning in tourism education is part of the research programme relating to the negot programme in International Tourism and Leisure Management (http://www.sdu.dk/Uddannelse/Fuldtidsstudier/Bachelor/Negot_international_turisme.aspx). The position is a part of the INNOTOUR research project (<http://www.innotour.com>) and focuses on the pedagogical design of learning activities in the negot programme mentioned above within and across the three learning spaces of the INNOTOUR hub, namely the learning exchange (educational space), the knowledge accelerator (research space), and the revenue generator (business space) . It should be undertaken as an action research project in collaboration with the tourism lecturers/researchers, the E-learning Organization at SDU, and business partners. A central question for the PhD project is the theoretical and practical investigation of how the pedagogical potentials of web 2.0 can be realized in educational practice. Subsidiary questions could be how to put web 2.0 tools like wikis, blogs, and social networking sites to concrete pedagogical use and how to strike a balance in practice between the user-centered approach of web 2.0 and the educational requirements of the negot programme. A provisional project description of maximum 5 pages should be submitted as part of the application for the position. The project description should include a research plan, a description of the goals of the project, discussion of relevant theory and method, and a time schedule for the 3 years. PhD research proposals will be evaluated according to project quality and research orientation. [Additional information is available from Associate Professor Janne J.
